

Brehm Given Fine

Jail Sentence Is Suspended

Dr. Walter Brehm, congressman from this district, was fined $5,000 and given a five to 15-month suspended sentence Monday for taking salary "kick-backs" from the clerk in his office.

Federal Judge Burnita S. Matthews said in putting Brehm on probation that she believed him at his trial when he insisted he did not know he was breaking the law.

The 58-year-old former Logan dentist was convicted on five counts of accepting a total of $1,000 in illegal political contributions from a woman clerk, Mrs. Emma S. Craven.

Brehm stood soberly with his hands in his coat pockets while the sentence was pronounced in Washington D. C. and gave no outward show of emotion.

His attorney, Leo A. Rover, announced that the case will be appealed.

Brehm had faced a possible 15 years in jail and a $25,000 fine—three years and $5,000 on each of the five counts.

JUDGE MATTHEWS pointed out that Brehm's case differed from that of former Rep. J. Parnell Thomas, (R) N. J., in that Brehm was not convicted of fraud.

Thomas was sent to jail after he was found guilty of fraud in padding his office payroll with persons who did not actually perform any work.

Brehm was convicted on the technical charge of violating the Corrupt Practices Act, which forbids congressmen from accepting political contributions from government employees.

Brehm refused comment immediately before he was sentenced on whether he plans to hold on to his seat in the House of Representatives.

The jury, which took more than four hours to reach a verdict, acquitted the 58-year-old Brehm on a sixth count of taking $140 from another former clerk, Mrs. Clara Soliday.

A seventh count was thrown out early in the trial by the judge.

Brehm could be sentenced to a maximum of 15 years in prison and fined $25,000—three years and $5,000 on each count.

THE TWO CLERKS said they turned over more than $9,000 to Brehm over a four-year period.

Mrs. Craven testified she gave the former Logan dentist $210 a month from her $6,500-plus salary for 10 months in 1948. Mrs. Soliday claimed she turned over as much as $240 a month of her salary, which ranged from $4,500 to $6,500 during the three years she worked for Brehm.

Brehm's conviction raised the question of whether he will resign his seat in Congress. He was reelected to his fifth term from Ohio's 11th district last Fall despite the charges against him. He said after the jury reported that he had no plans to resign.

Cuba Navy Base Blast Kills 5

GUANTANAMO, Cuba, June 11—U. S. naval officials disclosed today that five sailors were killed and one is missing as the result of an explosion Saturday at the Guantanamo naval base.

Ten men were injured, including three Cubans. A spokesman said the blast apparently resulted from the leakage of gasoline into water near one of the base piers. A few small vessels near the pier were damaged slightly.

MAC'S STAND GETS BACKING

Wedemeyer Says Acheson Wrong On Far East Data

WASHINGTON, June 11—Lt. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer today backed Gen. Douglas MacArthur's assertion that Secretary of State Dean Acheson was wrong in testifying that U.S. Far East commanders in 1945 recommended a Communist-Nationalist coalition in China.

The three-star general told senators probing MacArthur's dismissal that Acheson's "interpretation" of recommendations made in a secret message on Dec. 7, 1945, was erroneous.

Wedemeyer also denied that he ever had questioned the ability of Chinese Nationalist forces to defend Formosa against Communist attack.

He said that Acheson "conveys the erroneous implication" that he Wedemeyer, not only agreed with the "State Department's pessimistic views concerning the future of Formosa but that I even suggested the probable fall of that area to the Communists."

Wedemeyer said that in August, 1949, it was his "definite understanding that the State Department was on record to the effect that Formosa's fall was probable."

THE GENERAL ADDED that although the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommended action to avert such a catastrophe, he was "not sure at the time that the State Department would adopt those recommendations." He said his feeling was based upon the attempt to prevent Formosa's fall "by economic and diplomatic measures only."

Wedemeyer joined MacArthur in repudiating the impression drawn from the Dec. 7 message on the question of a coalition government in China.

The message was signed by Wedemeyer, MacArthur and Adm. Raymond A. Spruance.

Spruance, now in retirement at Del Monte, Calif., said in an interview yesterday that to the best of his recollection the recommendation meant that American aid to China be used to bring the Nationalists and Communists together.

Thus, the admiral took a stand against the two generals.

The wartime admiral emphasized, however, that he has "a very poor memory," but he expressed belief that the policy of encouraging Chiang Kai-shek to accept the Communists as working partners was one "which already had been adopted by Washington."

Spruance recalled that General Marshall at that time was enroute to China to persuade Chiang to accept such a policy. He commented:

"My understanding at that time was that we were simply suggesting that the aid which was recommended to go to the Chinese government could be used to further the policy that Gen. Marshall was going to put into effect. The principal dissenting group was the Communists."

She Almost Died From Laughing

STEGE, Denmark, June 11—A young girl in Stege laughed so hard recently she thought she'd die—seriously.

It all started with a joke told by her escort in a restaurant. She started to laugh and then found she couldn't stop. A doctor finally stopped her laughing after two hours' treatment.

Farm Tractor Helps Jenny Wren In Job Of Hatching Nest Of Eggs

The mechanical age has gone to the birds.

That is, it has according to a tale related by James T. Shea of East Main street.

Shea, who has a farm in Walnut Township, reports he is sharing a tractor with a mother wren.

The tractor is one of the older types which has a small oil can fixed to the side for manual mixture of oil with gasoline in the fuel tank.

But a tractor has other uses, and Shea wanted to farm. But he didn't want to break up a home.

So they compromised. And now when the Shea tractor chugs out into the fields, Jenny Wren flutters nearby. The heat of the engine keeps the eggs warm. And when the tractor is returned to its shed, the mother bird resumes the traditional posture.

She's had exercise. The eggs are still warm. What more could she ask? Yet, how will she explain, come hatching time, about the 2,000-pound mechanical "foster father"?

Marshall Ends Tour Of Korea

General Says Reds Want All Of Area

TOKYO, June 11—Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall ended a four-day Far Eastern visit today after voicing belief that the Communist war aim in Korea is to control that whole peninsula.

America's top defense official also denied again that his trip to Japan and Korea was connected in any way with possible cease fire negotiations.

The five-star general took off from Haneda airport in an Air Force Constellation at 12:11 a.m. Monday (EST) for his return to the United States.

Marshall said that the Communists want all Korea because "their position is much stronger if they hold this peninsula so close to Japan, rather than have a democratic government there."

Referring to the enemy's war objective, the secretary charged that the Reds are resolved to "force us from Korea and make it entirely a Communist peninsula."

"BUT THEY ARE in a very difficult situation now," he pointed out. "Face is a very important factor and they have that problem on their hands."

This was the first statement by a high-level American authority interpreting the significance of the Korean adventure in relation to the overall Communist plan of world expansion.

It implied that future action against Japan falls within the Communist plan of grand strategy.

The defense secretary revealed also that he had discussed Japan's defense with Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway during the long weekend conversations he held with the United Nations supreme commander.

In this connection, Marshall said, the role occupied by the two U. S. National Guard divisions now in Japan and that of the Japanese police reserve were weighed.

The 71-year-old secretary also conferred with Japan's premier, Shigeru Yoshida just before walking down a hallway in Tokyo last month.

Meat Dealers Warn Black Mart On Beef In Offing

CHICAGO, June 11—Slaughtering of beef cattle at big Chicago packing houses came to a standstill today and housewives throughout the country were warned that black market prices may be in operation by the end of the week.

The warning of "under the counter" sales came from George T. Nepl, executive secretary of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers.

He predicted that unless big packers resume beef slaughtering the black market will be the only source of supply for America's dinner table.

Spokesmen for the big four packers—Swift, Armour, Wilson and Cudahy—said they planned to do no beef slaughtering today because all cattle they purchased last week had been processed Friday.

They added that if their buyers are able to contract for cattle today, slaughtering may be resumed on a small scale tomorrow.

THEY EMPHASIZED, however, that no cattle will be bought unless Office of Price Stabilization regulations are followed. These regulations require a 10 percent rollback in average prices paid farmers for cattle. Michael Howlett, regional OPS director, said investigators were checking the sale of every head of cattle at Union Stockyards in

H-BOMB PROGRESS MAY BE TOLD

Recent Pacific Atom Test Results To Be Outlined

WASHINGTON, June 11—The Defense Department will hold its first full-dress news conference Wednesday on atomic weapons amid indications that some important information about the Pacific tests may be released.

Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada and leading atomic scientists will be present to describe the atomic tests staged under

Aussies 'Kidnap' Yank-Made Cars

SYDNEY, Australia, June 11—Members of Sydney's underworld have come up with a new version of kidnapping—they hold late-model American-made cars for ransom.

The usual procedure is to identify the owner after spotting one of the cars. Then they steal the car and by telephone demand from $1,200 to $2,800 for its safe return. Otherwise, they threaten to burn the car.

Quesada's directions at Eniwetok last month.

Key questions are expected to involve the progress made on the Pacific atoll toward development of the hydrogen bomb and atomic artillery shells that are known to be nearly ready to use.

The number of explosions set off at Eniwetok and other bits of information concerning the giant atomic program may be released.

Although previous news conferences have been held to discuss atomic weapons, the Wednesday session will be unusual in that:

1. It will be held in the Pentagon rather than in the offices of the Atomic Energy Commission.
2. It will stress the offensive possibilities of the new weapon rather than the facts necessary for preparing atomic defenses.

Defense officials said that the conference is part of an administration program to warn Russia and reassure friendly nations concern in America's atomic power.

They said that Korea, which admittedly provides few if any atomic targets, has overshadowed the fact that the super-weapons still in the arsenal are capable of destroying the industries of any major opponent.

Pentagon leaders believe that the atomic program provides more security per dollar spent than any other part of the defense program.

They point out that the atomic effort is still on a billion-dollar-a-year basis, and directly and indirectly employs fewer than 100,000 people.

The military services, on the other hand, are asking for a $60 billion budget and have 4.5 million military and civilian personnel in their direct employ, with at least that many more in war industries.

2 Drunk Drivers Lose Rights For Full Year Here

Drunken driving caused the loss of driving rights for one year each for two men Saturday in Pickaway County common pleas court.

In addition to suspending their driving licenses Judge William D. Radcliff fined Wilbur McDonald, 43, of Chillicothe Route 3 $25 and costs, and Earl Collins, 51, of Williamsport Route 1 $10 and costs. Each man was sentenced to 30 days in Pickaway jail. Both sentences were suspended, however.

McDonald was arrested by Deputy Sheriff James Diltz on U. S. Route 23 June 1 following a complaint by a motorist. Collins was arrested Friday by Circleville Police Officer Rod List on West Franklin street.

Poor Auto Driving Costs Ohioans $204 Million A Year, Expert Says

TOLEDO, June 11—One of America's top automotive engineers claims that impatience, negligence and incompetence are costing Ohio motorists more than $204 million annually.

Delmar G. Roos, former president of the Society of Automotive Engineers and vice-president of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., made the charge after completing a series of controlled mileage tests.

Roos concluded that the average motorist gets less than half the motoring miles he should out of a gallon of gasoline and that the average waste comes to about $80 for each vehicle owner.

"Speed alone cuts mileage almost in half," he said.

Heading a list of mechanical sins under the term of negligence are faulty spark settings, cylinder compression and tire pressures.

Each of these factors cuts gasoline efficiency between three and six percent.

Other common mechanical faults affecting fuel mileage are dirty air filters, dragging brakes and improper wheel alignment.

Communists Abandoning Key Points

Northeast Front Growing Stiffer

TOKYO, June 12—(Tuesday)—Allied armored columns captured the enemy-deserted anchors of Kumhwa and Chorwon in North Korea's "iron triangle" Monday, but ran into suddenly stiffened Red opposition to the northeast.

A front dispatch said that a Chinese Communist regiment, supported by accurate fire from self-propelled guns, blocked the Allied advance from Kumhwa along the road leading northeast to Kumsong, 12 miles northeast of Kumhwa on the rail-highway route connecting with the enemy's east coast communication lines.

Frontline officers were quoted as saying they believed the Allied forces had run up against the main Red defense line south of Kumsong. Intelligence sources said the Chinese Communists apparently had moved their Central Korean base of operations from the Chorwon-Kumhwa-Pyongyang triangle to Kumsong.

The Chinese regiment, numbering about 1,500 men, was entrenched along a half-mile high ridge line bordering the road from Kumhwa to Kumsong.

ALLIED INFANTRY MEN, who earlier had made gains of up to 4,500 yards, were "stopped cold" when they hit this line according to front dispatches. Two Allied frontal attacks were repulsed and a third was broken off because of darkness.

The Chinese Reds were believed to be covering the withdrawal of additional enemy supplies, equipment and troops from the mountain valley south of Kumsong. Such delaying actions are expected to continue through the mountains.

A low ceiling and rain in the afternoon hampered Allied aerial observation of enemy movements.

Until the Reds reeled out of Chorwon and Kumhwa, 17 and 18 miles above Parallel 38, some of the Korean war's fiercest fighting had raged on the approaches to both.

By seizing the two junctions, the United Nations forces thrust deeper into Central North Korea than they had been since last Winter.

They pulled out the props from a strategic triangle which has its apex at Pyongyang, 16 miles northeast of Chorwon and 12 northwest of Kumhwa.

This was the main buildup zone from which the Chinese invaders pumped men and materiel into their two reversed Spring offensives. Allied occupation of the triangle will seriously hamper any future Red assaults.

State Offering To Repave North Court Street

It will cost Circleville, $8,750 and a promise to restrict parking to have North Court street repaved from Pleasant street to the north corporation line.

Mayor Thurman I. Miller said Monday that the state highway department has agreed to put up another $8,750 and do the work.

"It's up to council now," said the mayor. He added that he has been working, together with Councilman George Crites, to have the street repaved since May, 1950.

An ordinance binding the city to put up its share of the repaving cost will be submitted to council next week.

The ordinance, if passed, will require the city to restrict parking to one side of the street only from Pleasant street to Haywood avenue. It would prohibit parking from Haywood to the corporation line.

MAYOR MILLER said the negotiations with the state highway department will be completed by the end of the month.

Marshall Ends Tour Of Korea

yo's Dai Ichi building to a small theater where he talked with the reporters.

He opened the news conference with a blast at what he termed "embroidered" newspaper speculation on the reasons for his dramatic secret flight to the Far East. He had arrived unheralded in Tokyo Friday morning, then flew to Korea with Ridgway and returned to the Japanese capital Friday night.

BESIDES DENYING rumors his trip was linked with possible behind-the-scenes peace talks with the Chinese Reds, Marshall specifically spiked one bit of speculation that he would visit Okinawa.

He said he is not stopping on that island during his return flight to Washington.

The secretary reiterated his denial he had brought new directives to Ridgway, as well as his denial of any link with possible peace moves.

He pointed out he had made these denials in Korea last Friday and at Haneda airport that night, but "apparently nobody believed me."

"Seemingly you won't accept facts," Marshall chided the newsmen. "You embroidered this thing beyond its meaning."

He defined part of the mission of the Eighth Army as being to "sustain itself and prevent a penetration of South Korea; to repulse any efforts of the Reds to get into South Korea."

Any additional comment by him on the international army's job in Korea, Marshall said, would provide the enemy with invaluable information.

The present Senate inquiry in Washington, Marshall declared, is giving the enemy a wealth of information.

"You can't tell me one thing the other fellow has told us," he said.

This situation, he pointed out, is necessary in a Democracy, but he added that even a Democracy must be careful.

Four of the violators were fined in the court of Circleville Mayor Thurman I. Miller, two were fined in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root and one was fined in the court of South Bloomfield Mayor Walter Heise.

Fined in the court of Mayor Heise was Robert Potter, 19, of Detroit, who was fined $50 and costs for reckless operation on Route 23.

State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells said the Michigan man passed other motorists three separate times in no-passing zones and crowded one driver from the road.

Fined in Magistrate Root's court were Joseph Novak, 38, of Logan, and Charles Cockrell, 40, of Portsmouth. Both men were fined for being in actual physical control of their autos while drunk.

NOVAK WAS FINED $50 and costs, $25 of which was later suspended, on an accusation filed by Deputy Jim Diltz, while Cockrell was fined $25 and costs on an affidavit filed by Ashville Marshal Ira Rose.

Patrolman Wells arrested all four men who were haled into the court of Mayor Miller last weekend.

James F. Booth of Columbus was fined $15 and costs in the court for passing in a non-passing zone on Route 23.

In addition, two men forfeited bonds in Miller's court last weekend when failing to answer traffic violation accusations.

Tennie Crabtree, 19, of Cleveland, forfeited $10 bond in the court for allegedly operating an auto without a driver's license; and Paul Easterday, 28, of Chillicothe Route 6, forfeited $3 bond for allegedly running a stop light at Walnut and Court streets.

1920 Marriage Heads For Rocks

A divorce petition has been filed in Pickaway County common pleas court by Ursil Henson against Homer Henson.

The wife's petition states they were married April 23, 1920, in Columbus, and have three children. She accuses the husband of gross neglect and extreme cruelty.

In addition to the divorce she asks for permanent alimony and a temporary restraining order to keep the husband from disposing of property or coming about the home in Williamsport during pendency of the case.

Brehm Gets $5000 Fine

pending the outcome of his appeal.

Should he resign, this district would go without representation in Congress until next election. The governor may appoint a senator, but not a congressman.

Brehm charged during the nine-day trial that the accusations against him stemmed from his political feud with the "Democrat machine" in his district.

His attorney, Leo A. Rover, declared in his final argument that the case was "put in motion" by Mel G. Underwood Jr., Democrat candidate defeated by Brehm last Fall, and Columnist Drew Pearson.

Rover charged the two men were the "hands" behind the government's "voice" and called them "a gossip-mongering columnist and a petty, pusillanimous, unsuccessful politician."

He appealed to the jury for a verdict that would "vindicate this self-made man and his lovely family," declaring:

"DECENT PEOPLE don't like the idea of disappointed politicians trying to send their opponents to the penitentiary to get back at them."

The government called Brehm's involved story contradicting the testimony of the two clerks "fantasy," and charged he was trying to "hide behind the skirts of his wife."

Mrs. Brehm testified she didn't tell her husband until last year that $600 contributed to his 1946 and 1948 campaigns by an "anonymous" donor actually came from Mrs. Soliday.

During Brehm's defense testimony, Ohio's two U. S. senators, Taft and Bricker, along with three other top congressional leaders appeared as character witnesses for the defendant.

Taft and Bricker, House Democratic Leader McCormack of Mass., House Republican Leader Martin of Mass., and Rep. Halleck (R) Ind., all praised Brehm as a "law abiding citizen."

The appearance of McCormack, a Democrat, came as a surprise since Brehm contended that the accusations against him were inspired by the "Democrat machine" in his home district.

Farm Produce Price, Demand To Stay High

WASHINGTON, June 11—The Agriculture Department has surveyed the price and demand situation for the nation's farmers and found that prices probably will stay high for most of their products this year.

Officials said prices farmers receive for milk and butterfat in 1951 will average well above 1950, but lower than in 1948. Seasonal reductions in egg supplies this Fall may be greater than usual and supplies available for consumption probably will be higher priced.

With more livestock on farms and meat prices substantially higher than in 1950, they predicted that the underlying demand for feed will continue strong.

Wheat prices, which have declined seasonally, will be checked by a reduced early movement of winter wheat and by purchase for export when new international agreements are announced later this month.

Officials said grower prices for most fruits will probably average somewhat lower than a year ago and in June and July prices received by farmers for fresh commercial truck crops probably will fall somewhat more rapidly than usual.

Baboons Frolic In Luxury Bus

CAPE TOWN, June 11—The driver and passengers of a luxury bus found when they returned from a stop for tea that a lot of monkey business was going on in the vehicle.

Twelve baboons were dancing on the roof and frolicking about inside with one—more dignified than the rest—sitting in the driver's seat.

On seeing the humans, the baboons fled with a collection of coats. All of the coats were recovered when the discouraged baboons dropped them in disgust after finding they weren't edible.

down the middle of the peninsula.

NORTHEAST OF KUMHWA, two dihard Chinese battalions, strung out along sheer-faced cliffs, savagely resisted two UN frontal attacks in a desperate battle for time to move enemy equipment out of the triangle.

But this opposition was reported weakening late Monday. A Monday night message from the west-central sector said an armor-reinforced infantry patrol drove into the debris-littered, six-way hub of Chorwon. They came "on the heels of fleeing Chinese who appeared unwilling to defend their 'iron triangle,' the dispatch recounted.

The Eighth Army's Monday night communique announced the Allied entry into the twin rail-highway bastions of Chorwon and Kumhwa at midday.

Stocks of enemy war supplies continued to fall into Allied hands. Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Eighth Army commander, said Sunday night his international ground forces had seized enough Red equipment since May 16 to equip three full divisions.

After the Chorwon-Kumhwa road was severed, the 4,000 Chinese rearguard soldiers streamed out of bunkers or ridges surrounding Chorwon and retreated north through the town, choked with rubble wrought by Allied artillery and air strikes.

The Fifth Airforce announced meanwhile that radar-equipped B-26 light bombers struck at seven North Korean airfields Sunday night and early Monday.

This was described as a "continuation of the Fifth Airforce's successful campaign to prevent the enemy from building up air striking capability south of the Yalu river." The latter marks the boundary between Korea and China's Manchuria.

Allied armies executed more than 900 sorties Sunday in strikes at enemy troops, arteries and other targets.

2 Stolen Cars Are Recovered By Officers

An auto stolen last week in Circleville has been recovered by the state highway patrol in Hebron.

City police said the auto of Leland Amann of Circleville Route 2 has been recovered in Hebron, where it had been abandoned when the engine was "burned out." The auto was taken from Watt street last Tuesday.

Meanwhile, an auto stolen last Tuesday in Columbus was recovered Sunday by State Highway patrolman Clyde Wells on the farm of Pickaway County Commissioner John Keller.

Wells said the stolen auto apparently had gone out of control at the Keller farm on Route 104 and plunged through one of the commissioner's farm fences.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

It is easy for us parents to be annoyed at the child who seems to us to talk too much. Yet we may not be concerned at all over the child, three, twelve, or fifteen who rarely talks.

We may suppose, indeed, that this child is a model of consideration and courtesy to others and the attitude and remarks of our friends may confirm this belief of ours.

Yet the child who rarely talks in the family's midst is missing much that is essential to his best education and personality growth and may be very unhappy. Nevertheless, there is an occasional child who, for his own good and the good of the rest of the family, does talk too much.

"Dear Dr. Myers: We have two children, a boy age seven and a girl age four. Both children are normal and healthy. Our problem is what we do to do to stop the constant talking of our little girl. All through dinner she rambles on and on, and if anyone else wants to speak she reminds them they are interrupting."

"The same thing happens when we are watching a television show or when company should come."

"I HAVE SAT WITH her for a few hours, thinking maybe if I did listen to her, without stopping her, it would help but it doesn't."

"I have also tried reading children's stories to her, but again she cannot be still long enough to become interested in the story."

"It seems the only time my husband and I can carry on a conversation is when she is not around, because she repeats to her playmates and anyone who might listen to her."

In substance, my reply was

New-Type Sub Engine Hailed By Navy Chiefs

CLEVELAND, June 11 — A revolutionary new-type submarine engine designed to give the United States underwater supremacy will be installed in four new attack submarines this year.

The 16-cylinder oil burner was unveiled in Cleveland before a naval delegation headed by Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews.

The engine, perfected after five years at a cost of more than $10 million, was built by the Cleveland diesel engine division of General Motors Corp.

Naval spokesmen hailed the engine as a "revolutionary factor in undersea warfare" and Rear Admiral Wilson D. Leggett, deputy chief of the Bureau of Ships, said crafts powered by the new engine will have "superior characteristics to any submarines in the world today."

Matthews, emphasizing the part of the submarine in event of war, said "the submarine has first priority in the Navy at present. We almost lost two wars from the menace of enemy submarines."

The new engine, many details of which were kept secret, develops twice the horsepower per pound and occupies about two thirds the space of World War II engines.

Hot Weather No Good For Farm Cattle

WASHINGTON, June 11 — Cows don't do their best in hot and humid weather, according to extension experts. They have recommended that farmers provide three essentials to insure better production.

These include an abundance of high-quality feed that can be eaten within a short period of time, a shady cool place to lie down, and a good supply of fresh water.

Good pastures, particularly rotation pastures, furnish the best feed, and extra roughage will help too. If cows don't have shade, it's a good idea to bring them into the barn during the heat of the day and allow them to lie in an open shed.

In general, anything that can be done to help make cows comfortable during the summer months will pay dividends in better production.

In View Of The News

By J. C. Oestreicher
INS Foreign Director

The assembly line — one of America's greatest contributions to industrial progress — emerged today as the key to Western European defense and the production gadget that will make aggression a lost cause from the outset.

Plain-spoken Gen. Omar N. Bradley gave this simple definition of Democracy's greatest need in the East-West struggle after a series of conferences in Paris.

The chief of the Joint Chiefs of Staff was lavish in his praise of France's determination to defend itself and of the nation's swing away from defeatism.

He pointed out that French production has risen to 135 percent of the prewar output.

But he spoke of "gaps," and it was apparent that he was thinking of European production which defense chiefs hold must be increased rapidly, especially while American military supplies are being shunted off to meet the grave requirements of the war in Korea.

BRADLEY FOUND that the French will continue to need money and raw materials, plus attainment of a proper balance between military and civilian production. It is apparent that he found the French stand just and reasonable but obviously could offer no immediate blueprint for putting all of France's military production on an assembly line basis.

Bradley's later visit to London was concerned more with purely military affairs, particularly integration of the Eastern Mediterranean into the North Atlantic defense system.

But the British obviously were not going to lose an opportunity to stress again their own needs for raw materials from the United States.

And the point also was bound to be made that British output for civilian needs must be considered, together with the need for maintaining at least present living standards.

Seemingly, there was only one unfavorable factor in connection with Bradley's visit to Paris.

This is a forthcoming election on June 17, in which Communists and rightwing DeGaullists have teamed up in criticism of the government for its continued search for United States aid for rearmament on the grounds this is making proud France a vassal of America.

DEFENSE MINISTER Jules Moch and other government leaders cite chapter and verse to show that France is maintaining her independence but at the same time must have American aid to preserve her freedom.

The Communist menace in France seems to have lost a great deal of its impetus and there is reason to believe that the rank and file of the workers are coming around to the belief that in increased defense production lies the key to survival.

Bradley in any case is not discouraged. If he were, he would not hesitate to say so.

Uncle Miltie Gets $1 Million In Cancer Drive

NEW YORK, June 11 — "Uncle Miltie," the comedian, not the horse, was hailed today as a "great thoroughbred" for raising more than $1 million to fight cancer in a 22-hour TV marathon.

Milton Berle personally answered more than 2,000 calls in accepting pledges for the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund in his third annual "teletthon."

The New York Telephone Co. installed 150 special phones, and 1,200 operators working in shifts handled an estimated 25,000 calls that poured into NBC and affiliated stations.

Columnist Walter Winchell, who stayed on-camera for 10 hours with Berle, paid him the following tribute:

"Uncle Miltie, the racehorse, was a great flop, but Uncle Miltie the star, proved again he is a great thoroughbred."

Berle, who clowned, chattered and clog-danced until 10 a. m. yesterday, pulled in $1,127,211 in

STRAIN OF SPEED

CAPT. James Jabara, jet ace, tells of the added tenseness of flying jet planes in combat over the propeller type. Speed is responsible. Reactions must be much swifter. Jabara was in only one inconclusive combat lasting 10 minutes. Usually a decisive action last two or three seconds.

This imposes intense strain, mental and physical, on a pilot. In modern flight the speed of sound has been exceeded. In combat over Korea it is approached. This makes it difficult for pilot or crew member to escape from a crippled plane. The strain of flying a jet and the queasy feeling in the stomach may last for two or three days.

The U. S. is recruiting thousands of trainees for jet aviation. They must be tutored until they are razor sharp. Training is more intense and longer drawn out than for other types of planes.

Speed is constantly challenging man's responses. The jets now making 600 to 700 miles an hour will be succeeded by new types capable of 1,000 miles, 1,500 or even more as rockets become manageable.

In the early days of railroads the argument was advanced they would never be feasible because the human system couldn't stand speeds in excess of 20 miles per hour. They were devoid of vision, but the strain of speed is becoming terrific.

KEEPING THE FAITH

FEW PERSONS who do not reside in Oklahoma ever heard of Jim Haning. He was a candidate for the state legislature from Seminole County. Among promises made to the voters he pledged that he would not accept pay for any days during the session of the legislature that the sessions were not in session.

It seems to have been the accepted practice for the legislature to meet four days a week, while the members were collecting pay for seven, at $15 per diem.

Jim was elected, and although many of those who voted for him must have forgotten his promise concerning pay Jim remembered it, with the result he accepted pay for 74 days, while his colleagues charged for the total of 126 days. Jim's take-home pay was $780 less than that of his fellow members.

No doubt demands for economy in government are as insistent in Oklahoma as they are in the other states. But apparently so far as the members of the legislature are concerned economy is something for the other fellow to practice.

When the Persian mess is settled, to the victor will belong the oils.

These Days

Albert Maltz and Edward Dmytryk were of the notorious Hollywood Ten who went to jail rather than say yes or no to being members of the Communist Party, which we now know most of them were by collateral testimony. Maltz chooses to remain a Communist and is publicly so in the affairs of the party. Dmytryk testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities that he once was a Communist, but now is no more.

Now along comes Maltz and says Dmytryk is not sincere of heart. In a two-page spread in the Hollywood Reporter, Maltz publishes an open letter to the Saturday Evening Post in which he does a complete hatchet job on his former pal.

The point at issue is that Dmytryk claims he ceased to be a Communist in 1945. Maltz asks:

"If Dmytryk at last, and finally, learned that he had been associated with a group of malevolent scoundrels whom he now repudiated—then let me ask further: Why did his wife continue to function publicly as a member of the Committee of the Wives of the Hollywood Ten? Why also did his wife join mine in August, 1950, in appearing in Sacramento, Calif., before the platform committees of the Democratic and Republican Parties and before the convention of the Progressive Party, to ask all three parties to include a statement on the case of the Hollywood Ten in their platform on civil liberties? And why, at the end of August, did Mrs. Dmytryk join my wife in a common visit to prison? Why did they sleep in the same hotel room, hire a car together, travel 120 miles from Charleston to Mill Point, W. Va., visit, remain over night and travel back together? The prison records show they were together and twenty officers and inmates will testify to it."

Waltz was Dmytryk's best man at the latter's marriage to Jean Porter on May 12, 1948, which was three years after Dmytryk said he ceased to be a Communist. So Maltz wants to know how that happened, which, of course, to ordinary people should mean nothing, for cannot men be friends who differ politically? He even intimates that Dmytryk is a Communist who has gone underground for the duration.

Now, I do not want to get into the row between these pals. The House Committee on Un-American Activities ought to have Maltz down to Washington to testify as to this letter. Let the Communists tell their own story in their own way.

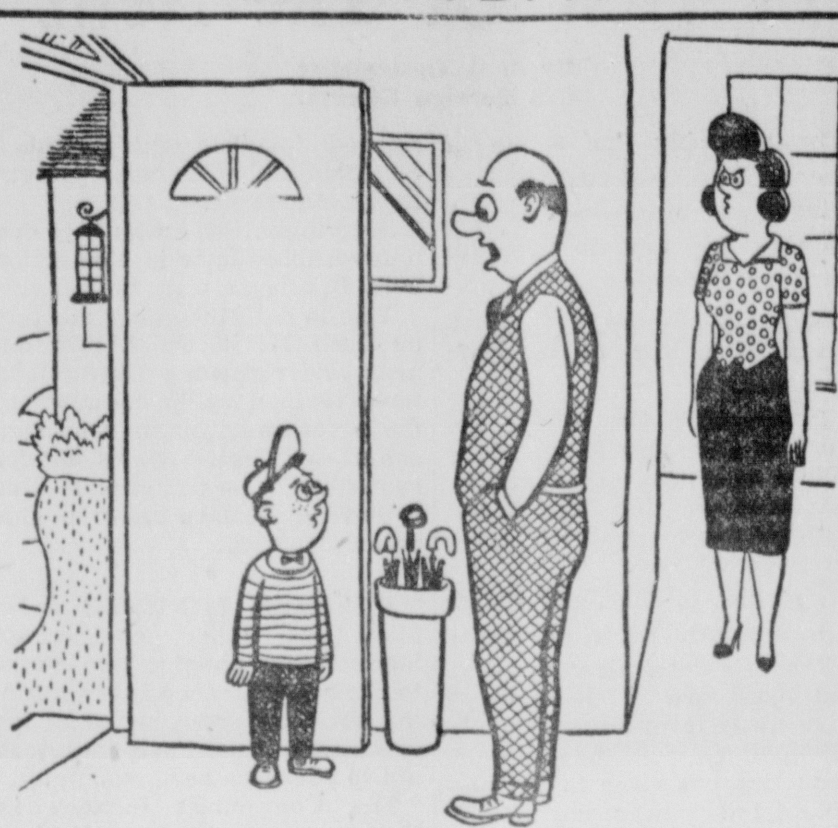

But what is serious about all this is that motion pictures and television need to be freed not only from Communist influence but from the reputation of being dominated by Communists and their friends. These industries have been and can be useful to the country not only as amusement and entertainment but as a creative force in mass education.

That makes Hollywood a serious place, one that needs to be watched and studied. Little children get many ideas from the movies and from television; they get them at so early an age that they remain as character-forming phases of the child's life. For instance, such characters as Roy Rogers and Hopalong Cassidy are substantial forces in the development of national ideals. This must not be regarded as far-fetched, because contact with children in large numbers will establish the correctness of the view.

Ice Packs Used in Treatment Of Bursitis of the Shoulder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE little fluid-filled sacs placed around the joints to insure frictionless movement are known as bursae. That at the shoulder joint, known as the subdeltoid bursa, seems especially liable to inflammation, with swelling of fluid. The swelling, of course, causes pressure and this, in turn, results in pain. Anything which will reduce this pressure will also banish the pain.

This rule would seem to offer a simple remedy for bursitis but, unfortunately, it is easier said than done. Hence, the number of methods for treating this disorder have multiplied since it was first recognized in 1904.

Puncturing of Sac
They include repeated puncturing of the sac, injection of pain-deadening substances, scraping the interior of the bursa, and removing it altogether.

Treatment with X-ray and the giving of a substance known as ammonium chloride by mouth, which by stimulating kidney action, eliminates fluids from the body, are other measures which have been employed. All of these forms of treatment have met with varying degrees of success.

Simple Method
A simple method of treatment, employing ice packs, has recently been described. It has proved useful not only for subdeltoid bursitis, but for bursitis in other parts of the body.

Although the application of heat has been used in treating this condition for many years, it is noted that heat of any type usually makes the pain worse, probably by increasing the pressure in the bursa. The ice packs, on the other hand, usually bring prompt relief from pain, not only because of the pain-deadening quality of cold, but also by reducing the pressure in the bursa.

Rest in Bed

The patient should be at rest in bed, the arm supported on pillows as far away from the body as the patient can stand. Finely cracked ice is put into a Turkish towel. One or two layers of flannel are placed next to the skin over the shoulder, then the ice pack is adjusted over the flannel. It is left in place for from 30 to 60 minutes and reapplied every three hours.

This treatment is so simple that the patient can carry it out in his own home after it has been demonstrated to him. Those who suffer from acute bursitis may well employ this form of treatment which usually brings at least temporary relief.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
J. B.: Would you recommend operation for hernia in a woman 60 years of age?
Answer: Treatment for hernia at the present time consists in operation or injection of the hernia. In some cases, operation is necessary, while in other cases injection of the hernia may suffice.

The operation for hernia is not a serious one. It would be best for you to consult your physician so that he can tell what type of treatment is best in your particular case.

It was true that I headed a Federal squad that did the Tompkins' interests some good and there probably was a discussion of it at the time. Moreover, I think Tompkins was planning to call me in, maybe to watch Shirley and keep Farwell away from her. I found traces of notations on the calendar but the page itself was gone."

"I noticed that page was torn off," the deputy inspector said. "We didn't get it."

"I suppose the fire did. Anyway, Farwell had plenty of opportunity to know something about me and what better alibi witness than someone he considered a cop? But before he could call anyone he had things to do. Fortunately or unfortunately, depending upon your viewpoint, he had several hours in which to operate."

"Go on, I'm with you."

"All right. Besides directing suspicion away from himself, he must have thought it an excellent idea to turn it upon someone else—someone with a none-too-savory reputation, like Solly Spanish. He needed some article that would turn attention there or at least add to the general confusion. Leaving the house, he dropped by there and probably stole the first thing he could get hold of which was the pillow with the name on it. If Irma Nelson hadn't been afraid that Solly was guilty and lied about it you might have cleaned the whole thing up then."

"That's the story of my life," O'Callahan said. "People lying when the truth would make things so easy."

"Now then," McGann said. "All he needed was a dark theatrical wig. Everything else was here. He picked one up and came back here. Having the pick of Ronnie's wardrobe, he outfitted himself exactly as Tompkins was dressed, borrowing his diamond ring."

"How about that shot you heard? A blank?" "Yes. The automatic used in the murder had, of course, thrown out the shell. All Farwell had to do was take the powder and wadding from one of the extra cartridges in the box and re-load it. That's your missing cartridge. You'll probably find it in a washbowl trap."

"Then he called you."

"The whole thing nearly collapsed again when Weston came to the door. Just why Ronnie had left that message for Weston earlier in the day we'll never know. He may have wanted to alert him to his pending elopement with Miss Jones here." He looked down at Chary, who was examining her hands. "Farwell had no desire to try his disguise on anyone who knew Tompkins well, so after one peek from the window he declined to answer the door."

"Then you came along."

"Weston went away and I came along, as you say. Farwell had his act nicely arranged. Pretending to be Ronnie, he showed me the gallery and gave me a big buildup in here. He told me that 'Farwell' was intoxicated and asleep upstairs and all the rest as I described to you on the night of the murder."

"He had to work fast after sending me out to talk with 'Farwell' but split-second timing came natural to a radio actor, I presume." McGann walked over to Weston who was reclining on one elbow. He said, "You're dead, lie down." Again he seized him under the arms, now pulling him to the middle of the room.

"This time he turned the body over on its back so that external bleeding would start. He put the ring back on Tompkins' finger and slipped the pillow under his head. Then all he had to do was to slide the murder gun under the drape, open the window and put his prepared blank on one of the burning logs."

"And get upstairs—"

"In a hurry. Using this back staircase he could get into the room without going into the front hall. I probably was already kicking on the door. He ripped off the wig and the borrowed tuxedo, and stuck his head in the washbowl. His special hurry was to let me into the room before the fire exploded that shell downstairs. We were talking when the blank went off. As he had hoped, the force knocked it back onto the floor. You know the rest." McGann turned to Farwell. "Any corrections?"

Perspiration stood on the pasty cheeks. A sickly smile touched the loose mouth. "You gotta admit it was good," Farwell said.

"Oh, I do," McGann said. "But only extraordinary luck got you through. I didn't touch the gun or I would have found it cold. The heat of that staircase kept the body from cooling off too quickly and warning the medical examiner's assistant."

Farwell straightened with an actor's response to a leading role. "That wasn't luck," he said. "I thought of everything."

"Everything except Shirley Stanton's reaction. You didn't figure she'd chance losing her drug contact and tell her suspicions."

The smile faded and the disc jockey shivered. "She's better off. Once this stuff gets you, you're better off dead."

Weston said, "I warn you. Either I get up now or I go to sleep."

"All right," McGann pulled him to his feet, again kept O'Callahan. "Mr. Farwell faced O'Callahan in deeper and his panic increased. He gave Shirley Stanton an overdose of morphine in a cup of coffee but nobody seriously considered suicide and the investigation was merely intensified."

McGann told of exploring the old house that preceding night, and of finding the soiled dress shirt in the hamper. "There had been other indications of a very fast deal but the story didn't fit in with anything I knew then. Now we know that Farwell had had time to discard it and put the tuxedo away while I was down here waiting for police. Maybe he didn't notice that he had gotten blood on it while handling Tompkins' body. Or perhaps he just had no chance to destroy it. At any rate, he probably expected it to be overlooked in the general linen."

Weston asked, "What was all this hoopla about Chary?"

"Farwell's last attempt to get out from under," McGann said. "He must have started work on it early Monday after he saw that Stanton's death wouldn't save him. But if Chary could telephone someone, make what appeared to be a confession and then be found dead, the investigation might well be closed."

He looked at her soberly. "Just how he got her here this morning she'll have to tell us herself but it wasn't hard to guess how the telephone call was worked."

Walking over to Tompkins' record player, McGann lifted the lid. There was a record on the turntable. "I can't claim that I detected it. The difference between Tompkins' real voice and the one Farwell handed me here, especially on a machine, right off. But there was enough of a hunch to make me want to hear it again."

"I went looking for it and was doubly suspicious to learn that Farwell also had asked for it 'for his collection.' Luckily, Pearson intercepted and tried to steal it or it would have been very accidentally broken as soon as Farwell got it. Anyway, he must have become desperate and resolved to go after Chary at the first opportunity. This is what I heard on the phone."

McGann started the machine and lowered the needle. There was a moment's pause and then Chary spoke. "I'm sorry," she said. "You won't see me again." She began to weep. "It will be better this way. I don't know what happened to me... really I don't..."

Chary was watching the machine with parted lips. McGann turned the volume up and she winced.

"Just far away," the machine said. "...sometimes things happen... and people do things they never dreamed they would... or could..." He let it run to the last "goodbye."

We're still waiting for someone to tell us where the administration got the hot tip that it's safe to beat Communies in Korea, but not the same Communies before they arrive in Korea from Manchuria.

A whole parade of witnesses has told the Senate probers that the Communies can be worn down to quitting in Korea, but it would be "grave risk" to man a cicle them in Manchuria.

"Mildly," admitted the student, "but what really made me see red was when he reached in for my girl and heaved her out, too."

Toy Balloons Now Carry Message of Free World | Iron Curtain No Barrier Despite Moscow's Efforts

WASHINGTON—There is first-hand evidence that messages of goodwill and friendship from the Free World are continuously passing through the Iron Curtain, and are being received by the people of the Soviet world—not only in the satellite countries of Eastern Europe but by those living within Russia itself.

The amazing fact is that much of the credit for this cracking of the Iron Curtain can be given to puppet shows and toy balloons, which were financed by the United States through the Marshall Plan.

When the idea was first suggested nobody thought it would have such far reaching consequences, as it was conceived as a plan to inform the people of Western Europe regarding the great advantages and benefits of a united Europe.

At the present time a self-contained mobile exhibit, called "Europe Builds," is completing a 6,000-mile tour of Western European countries. It carries its own tent, shows its own motion pictures, features its own puppet shows—all in the language of the different countries. It has already shown in France, Belgium, Germany, Denmark and Sweden.

Europe Builds tells the story of progress toward Western European integration and what it will mean for higher living standards and a more secure peace when 270 million Europeans can produce for each other and sell to each other freely. As a feature of this traveling exhibit, visitors have been given and they have released into the still free air about half a million toy balloons.

Brightly colored, hydrogen-filled, about one foot in diameter, each balloon carries a postcard with a return address signed by the person who sends it up. It is a greeting of goodwill and friendship from one citizen of Western Europe to another.

Household Hints

If you like to serve rolls hot, but don't want to use the oven, heat them in the top of a double boiler over boiling water. Keep them covered, and simmer over a low flame for ten minutes or so.

An old-fashioned brass or metal bed can be modernized easily. Discard the high headboard and use the footboard at the head of the bed. Make a pretty fabric slip-cover for the new headboard and the job's done.

Don't throw old jugs and pots away. With a little imagination, they can be turned into delightful lamps for play rooms or children's rooms.

Editors' Roundtable

"Editors' Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

ACHESON And FORMOSA
To a large minority of editors, the State Department's 1949 document discounting in advance the possible loss of Formosa was justified propaganda. But a plurality of editors sees in this memorandum, now fully disclosed in the investigation of General MacArthur's dismissal, unwise propaganda and bad judgment. And to a considerable minority it appears, moreover, to have been one move in a State Department policy of opposition to and undermining of the Chiang Kai-shek government.

OAKLAND Tribune (Rep.): "It is easy to see why Secretary of State Acheson objected to making public the much-discussed document dealing with Formosa. This foreign policy memorandum... told consular officers in 1949 to prepare for the fall of the Chinese Nationalist-held Formosa, and threw in for good measure a statement which flouts the opinions of our top military experts, that Formosa was not of vital importance to American defense. . . . There is no reason why it should have been suppressed other than to 'save face' for Secretary Acheson and others in his Department."

WASHINGTON Post (Ind.): "It turns out, according to Acheson's statement, that the directive was issued on the advice of one of the heroes of the diatribes, General Wedemeyer, who told Assistant Secretary Allen, then heading the Voice of America, of the parlous condition of Formosa, and the need, in terms of psychological warfare, to get America off the hook. . . . The premise was that the United States would not intervene in Formosa, so the necessity arose in official policy to disengage the United States from Chiang's sinking ship, so as not entirely to submerge America's prestige."

ST. PAUL Dispatch (Ind.): "Even if the idea for the memorandum did originate with Wedemeyer, the responsibility belongs to Acheson. . . . Rarely has a foreign office of a major nation been made to look so ridiculous as does the State Department in the light of this horrible example of bad judgment and lack of foresight. What is worse, Acheson undoubtedly is correct in his opinion that publication of this document puts in the hands of the Communist powers a very damaging weapon."

SALT LAKE CITY Tribune (Ind.): "The memorandum indicates that the State Department expected Formosa to fall. This can be called defeatism, but it was not unnatural at a time when the Communists. . . seemed ready to cross the straits to the island. . . . In another policy, opposition to U. S. military intervention, the department's stand was in keeping with public opinion of the time. Since then, of course, there have been changes. The Korean war was followed by the 'neutralization' of Formosa by the U. S. Navy and. . . a military mission has been sent to the island and military supplies have been promised."

CLEVELAND Plain Dealer (Ind.-Dem.): "In our opinion, Acheson's exposition of our Formosa policy does not hold water. A more plausible explanation was given by Senator Knowland, who said he believed that the State Department had representatives on Formosa at that time who were 'following a studied course to undermine the position of the government of the Republic of China and had consistently sent back reports that the island could not hold out.' . . . When the Defense Department proposed in 1949 that a military mission be sent to Formosa, along with some military equipment, the State Department vetoed the idea."

WILMINGTON (Del.) News (Ind.): "After a series of crushing military defeats by the Chinese Reds, Chiang had abandoned the mainland and taken refuge in Formosa. His beaten army, outnumbered by at least 5 to 1, could hardly be expected to defend the island successfully. . . . The State Department therefore issued the secret memo, asking its employees to go around saying that Formosa really didn't matter to the United States. . . . Most people, at one time or another, have tried to save face after losing something they wanted by pretending that they never wanted it particularly."

BALTIMORE Sun (Ind.-Dem.): "It is questionable whether this was good propaganda. Grant that it is important to save face in the Far East. . . . Still, we made public representations at variance with our real policies and convictions. . . . We were concerned and did recognize the military importance of the island. The document was intended for propaganda purposes only. The revelation of this fact of necessity is damaging to our future propaganda. It will be used by those who are countering us abroad, and thus tend to diminish the force of what our representatives say."

Man Dies Soon After Windfall

LEWISTOWN, Ill., June 11—A San Antonio, Tex., man who was sole heir to $600,000 died two days after learning of his inheritance.

He was 73-year-old William H. Crothers who just last Friday was declared heir to the estate of a Lewistown woman he never had seen.

Crothers died Sunday, stricken with a heart attack in the lobby of the Spoon River hotel where he was staying.

Last Friday, County Judge Albert Scott ruled Crothers, a retired automobile dealer, the sole legal heir to the estate of Mrs. Martha Waggoner, who died last March 26.

Mrs. Waggoner, 70, died intestate and Crothers, a first cousin, was the closest relative to claim the estate.

Third Quarter Steel Lack Seen

CLEVELAND, June 11—Magazine Steel predicted today that the third quarter will be about the toughest yet experienced by civilian goods manufacturers from the standpoint of supply.

The national metalworking trade publication said that "free" steel for the general market after rated needs are cared for may not exceed to 25 to 30 percent of total production.

"In certain products," Steel continued, "the amount of 'free' steel will fall considerably short of demand despite reduced manufacturing schedules occasioned by mandatory cutbacks in steel use and vacation interruptions."

Grass Silage Proves To Be Successful Idea

WASHINGTON, June 11—The Agriculture Department says experience with grass silage has proved so satisfactory that in one year the number of Wisconsin farmers storing a grass crop in the silo doubled. About three out of four silos were filled with wilted silage chopped in the field.

Officials said present equipment may raise the expense per ton but field chopping cuts hours of labor. They said some of the best organized farmers using field choppers need crews of only three workers, and one or two of these may be a boy, woman, or elderly man who is able to drive a tractor or truck.

The department predicts that machinery for handling grass crops direct to the silo will soon be developed and will enable a farmer to store from 15 to 20 acres a day with a crew of three.

Poultry Dressing Plants Boomed By Ag Experts

WASHINGTON, June 11—The U.S. Department of Agriculture has recommended more small local poultry dressing plants as a method of making dressed poultry more readily available in the producing areas and in and around towns and smaller cities.

Agriculture researchers say these small plants not only help to increase the per capita consumption of poultry, but also help to prevent price-depressing glut on the large city poultry markets.

They suggest three floor plans for small plants, one for a farm dressing plant with 2 to 5 workers, the other two, both for commercial dressing, are for five to nine workers.

The agriculture officials suggest these plants have definite advantages over larger operations. They cite greater output per worker, smaller plant investment, lower labor and most other costs, less personnel turnover, and more stable and uniform week-to-week operations.

Husband Gets Divorce Decree

A divorce has been granted to Charles William Calhoun from Juanita Florence Calhoun by Judge William D. Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court.

The couple was married Oct. 17, 1948, in Russell, Ky. They have no children. Judge Radcliff found the wife guilty of gross neglect of duty. Her maiden name, Juanita Florence Shoe maker, was restored, and she was barred from any rights in the husband's property.

Replacing Fullen, councilmen named one of their colleagues, Orville Ruh.

And taking Ruh's seat as a councilman will be Tom Purcell who will serve the unexpired term.

Wrecked Plane Yields 5 Bodies

Names of the servicemen were withheld pending notification of next of kin. The pilot was Douglas Wagner of Dallas.

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

Prom—time puzzlers from the mailbox—and answers:

1. What should a boy wear to a formal junior-senior prom if he doesn't wear a tuxedo? Ans.—A dark blue suit, white shirt, quiet tie, black socks, black shoes. Other possibilities: A dark brown or dark gray suit. But dark blue is first choice, for it's considered more formal.

2. Which way is "up" when you wear a corsage? Ans.—It's correct to wear flowers as they grow, with their "heads" up, stems and ribbon downward.

3. Where can I wear my corsage if I wear a strapless dress? Ans.—A single flower or two in your hair, at your waist, on your wrist or on your little evening bag. A single blossom or two such as gardenias are easier to wear than a larger corsage if your dress is strapless; perhaps you can give your date a hint.

4. When a girl invites a boy to a prom at her school, who pays? Ans.—The girl pays for the tickets. The boy provides transportation, if possible; if not, the girl can arrange for them to go with another couple, if she wants to.

5. When her date calls for her, should the girl greet him at the door or should her mother open the door? Ans.—There's no definite etiquette rule on this, but it's nicer for the girl to greet her date at the door and less embar-

Bishop Says U.S. Now Is Too Nationalistic

LAKEVILLE, June 11—Bishop Hazen G. Werner, leader of 500,000 Ohio Methodists, believes Americans are too nationalistic in their outlook.

Werner, in the traditional Sunday sermon concluding the 13th session of the Ohio annual conference of the Methodist church in Lakeside yesterday, called for more understanding of world problems.

Citing India as a case in point,

Werner said "it is regrettable that we do not recognize the fact that India is unequivocally devoted to freedom and it is unbelievable that there can be as much ignorance and misunderstanding among many Americans, including a great number of Christian people, concerning India."

He urged Americans to give "every assistance and encouragement" to India in its effort to develop its own government, pointing out that India "is neither pro-Communist nor anti-American."

In the closing business session late Saturday, the Rev. Albert L. Slack of Miamisburg was elected secretary of the Ohio conference, succeeding Dr. Kenneth S. Leary of Middletown. The Rev. John W. Dickhaut of Columbus was elected associate secretary.

The work of the House Committee on Un-American Activities has been invaluable in the cleansing of Hollywood which must now include television. But it is essential for the public to make a distinction between such creatures as the Hollywood Ten and the fine men and women of the Motion Picture Alliance.

The assumption that Hollywood is made up of the shameless creatures who publicize their vices is false. When one digs through the heap of dirt that has been publicized, it is not difficult to find serious-minded, healthy-thinking Americans who work in the right direction. I call attention to the members of the Motion Picture Alliance who have risked their careers to fight for America.

Bantam Ben Hogan Geared To Win '51 National Open

NEW YORK, June 11—Ben Hogan, who has been practicing especially for the big event since last Tuesday, should rate as the hot favorite in the National Open golf championship starting Thursday at Oakland Hills Club, Birmingham, Mich.

■ If Hogan can't make it for the third time in the last four renewals of the classic, then you can look to someone like Roberto de Vicenzo or Bobby Locke as most likely to succeed.

Hogan, who won in 1948 and last year repeated after missing the 1949 tournament because of an automobile accident, is taking no chances on not being ready. He went to the scene of the event Tuesday and has been playing there ever since instead of participating in the Goodall Round Robin, which ended yesterday in New Rochelle, N.Y.

The little man with the big game of golf, who provided one of the great sports epics with his comeback victory last year after a nearly fatal auto smash-up, is the one the rest will fear most.

AS DEFENDING champion, he will be the main target. As British Open champion, Locke will be pretty much in that same category. Both are superior performers under pressure.

If you can play at your best when your nerves are nearly snapping and popping like loose wires, and you have a good sound game, and you can think

Boxer Remains Critical, In Coma

WASHINGTON, June 11—Elijah "Little Dynamite" Williams, Washington featherweight, remained in a coma today and his condition was still listed as critical.

The 21-year-old boxer suffered a basal skull fracture and a brain hemorrhage when he was knocked out in the 10th round by Gene Smith in a bout in Griffith Stadium last Thursday night.

clearly and with golf savvy and you get some breaks, the Open is easy. That's all you need, plus the endurance required for such a grind.

They play 18 Thursday, 18 Friday and 36 holes Saturday when the tension is so tough you couldn't slice it with an ax.

They play it, too, on a tough course whose par has been cut to 70 for this event, a 70 hindered by bunkers strewn across fairways at just the right spots to bounce the ball into the rough, and with a lake bordering this green and traps waiting at all of them.

Under different conditions but on that same course, Cyril Walker won the 1924 Open with 297 against Bobby Jones' 300 and in 1937 Ralph Guldahl won with a then record of 281.

The course supposedly is tougher now than ever before and the talk heard in golfing circles is that a score up around 284 will win it. Players don't get a written guarantee with that. Any one of the tournament tough guys entered could get hot and stay hot through the four rounds to come up with a final sub-par figure.

HOGAN AND LOCKE, not to mention Jimmy Demaret, Lloyd Mangrum, Sam Snead, Jim Frier, and perhaps a dozen others are capable of spectacular performances.

The way Hogan took the event last year over the marathon route in a playoff proved that he is hale and hearty as ever for golfing purposes, and he will be the one the rest will draw a bead on.

Locke has won a lot of big ones including the last British Open and in two appearances in the U.S. Open was a main threat. He finished third and fourth. This could be his year.

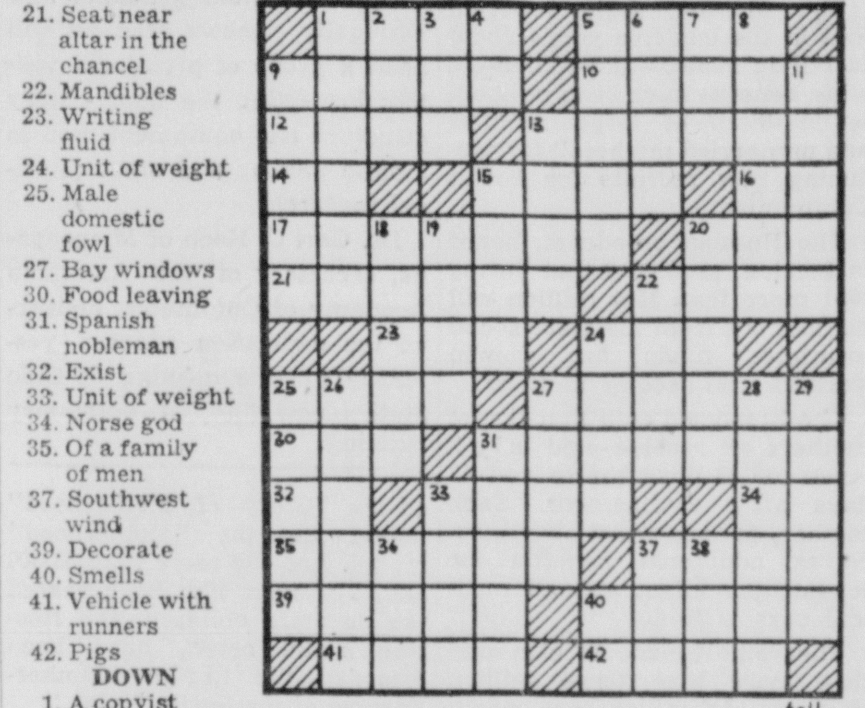

Still another possibility is Carey Middlecoff, the Memphis dentist, who won in 1949 while Hogan was laid up, and some are stringing along with him as a tough threat, even in the face of what Hogan and Locke may do.

2 Local Golfers Register Eagles

Two Circleville golfers posted eagles on number six hole Sunday at Pickaway Country Club. Teacher Bob Friece and Poultryman Dwight L. Steele both registered two-under-par deuces for the 338-yard number six during their rounds of the local links.

Club Manager Ed Amey said Friece drove to within 50 yards of the green, while Steele had a lie about 10 yards further back.

Both men holed out on their approaches to take eagles on the par four hole.

Friece continued to split the fairways in his 18-hole stint, collecting a one-under-par 71 for the day, although Steele faltered to tally a 96-stroke card
